

FARR HISTORY

The tournament that is now called the Jamie Farr Toledo Classic presented by Kroger, Owens Corning and O-I started in 1984 at the former Glengarry Country Club (now Stone Oak Country Club). After four tournaments there (no tournament in 1986), it was moved to Highland Meadows Golf Club in Sylvania. That same year, it was shortened from 72 holes to 54 holes. The 72-hole format returned in 1997.

Betsy King, $4,156
JoAnne Carner, $3,227
Alice Miller, $3,227
Dianne Dailey, $3,227

■ RECAP: Lauri Merten (then Lauri Peterson) shot a course-record 65 in the third round to open a three-shot lead over Nancy Lopez, whose 66 was the only other score in the 60s that day. Merten led by as many as six strokes in the final round but faltered — bogey, double-bogey and bogey on Nos. 8-10 — and the golfers fell into a tie with five holes left. A birdie on No. 14 put Merten one up, and she clinched the win with a par on 18 while Lopez bogeyed.

■ THE MERTEN FILE: She earned $108,920 the year she won the Farr, one of only three times she cracked the six-figure mark. Biggest year was 1993, when she won the U.S. Women's Open, her only major championship, and earnings of $394,744. She is no longer an active tour player.

Colleen Walker, $5,819
Lauren Howe, $5,819
Cindy Hill, $4,112
Dianne Dailey, $3,675

■ RECAP: Nancy Lopez had a piece of the lead from the start and Penny Hammel, a top rookie, shot a third-round 72 to stand two shots off the pace. Hammel, out of the spotlight that was following Lopez in the last group, fired a 65 to win her first tour event, while Lopez settled for second again. Hammel trailed Lopez by four at the turn, but a birdie on 10 and an eagle on 12 turned things around.

■ THE HAMMEL FILE: Went on to earn rookie of the year honors in 1985. Didn't win again until the 1989 Farr.

1986

■ No tournament held because the PGA Championship was played at Inverness Club.

■ RECAP: A struggling unknown named Nancy Taylor opened with a 4-under 68, then extended her lead to two shots with a second-round 69. Despite a 73 on Saturday, she maintained a two-shot edge. But Jane Geddes authored a final-round 67 for an 8-under 280 total and a two-shot victory.

■ THE GEDDES FILE: The Farr title was the third of Geddes' career and one of her five during the 1987 season, including the LPGA Championship. Now retired, she posted 11 career wins.

1988 TOP 10

Lynn Adams, $6,806
Sarah LeVeque, $6,806
Heather Farr, $5,513
Amy Read, $5,513

■ RECAP: Nancy Lopez led Laura Davies by one shot after one round, by one shot after two rounds and by one shot after three rounds of a weather-plagued event. On the final day, Lopez finally lost the lead when she bogeyed No. 11 and Davies birdied. But it was Davies' stunning eagle on No. 12 that crushed Lopez. Davies, hitting from the bottom of a hill, hit an open wedge, then saw the ball check up on the second bounce and roll into the cup.

■ THE DAVIS FILE: She had won at least one tournament for six straight years before going winless in 1999. But she bounced back with two wins in 2000. Davies also won the U.S. Open in 1987, before joining the LPGA. The '88 Farr was the third of her 20 tour wins.

Heather Drew, $5,582
Jennifer Wyatt, $5,582
Caroline Keggi, $5,582

■ RECAP: Moving to a new home at Highland Meadows and being contested over 54 holes for the first time, the Farr saw Penny Hammel make her move in the second round on her way to becoming the first two-time Toledo champ. Hammel fired a 5-under 66 to go to 7-under 135 for the tournament and take a two-shot lead on Liselotte Neumann. In the final round, a bogey at No. 10 dropped Hammel into a tie with Betsy King. Neumann and Nancy Lopez were a shot behind. But Hammel's closing 71 was enough to win the championship.

■ THE HAMMEL FILE: Became the first two-time Farr champion (Kelly Robbins later matched that feat and Se Ri Pak would far surpass it).

Elaine Crosby, $6,249
Jennifer Wyatt, $6,249
Penny Hammel, $6,249

■ RECAP: JoAnne Carner was the big story of the first round, firing a 4-under 67 to tie for the lead with Tina Tombs. Carner was vying for her first win since 1985. Tombs was vying for her first win period. Betsy King grabbed the lead with a second-round 70, but Tombs stayed close and then took over in the final round. She roared out of the gate with five birdies in her first six holes, made the turn in 29 and won by four strokes.

■ THE TOMBS FILE: The Farr stands as the only win of Tombs' career. She had her most successful financial season in 1993, when she won $68,592.

■ RECAP: Amateur Vicki Goetze was the first-round story with a 68 that left her one shot off Deb Richard's lead. A second-round 66 gave Alice Miller a two-stroke edge over Richard, and the latter authored a final-round 68 to tie things and prompt the Farr's first playoff. And what a playoff it was, with Miller winning on the third hole of sudden death with a 14-foot birdie putt. The triumph ended a six-year drought for Miller.

■ THE MILLER FILE: From 1983-85, Miller won seven titles, including a major (the Nabisco Dinah Shore), and earned more than $600,000.

■ RECAP: Vicki Fergon left Patty Sheehan five shots behind with an opening-round 65, but Fergon disappeared with a 77 in the second round. On Sunday Sheehan played nine groups ahead of the leaders and posted a 66 for a 209 total. Six players came to the final hole with a shot at tying Sheehan and all failed.

■ THE SHEEHAN FILE: The Farr win was the 28th of her career. When she nabbed her 30th a year later, Sheehan qualified for entry into the LPGA Hall of Fame. She won 35 times, including six major championships, and compiled career earnings of $5.5 million.

■ RECAP: Vicki Goetze again stole the spotlight by making her professional debut at the Farr on a day when six players shared the first-round lead. Jane Geddes tied a course record with a 7-under 64 in round two and led by a pair of shots over Brandie Burton. It was Burton who proved to be cool on a scorching hot Sunday, bagging a key birdie at the par-5 17th to edge three-time U.S. Open champ Hollis Stacey by a shot.

■ THE BURTON FILE: Just 21 years old at the time, Burton had a huge year in 1993, adding two other wins to the Farr and earning $518,000. She then went five years before winning again, but it was a biggie — her second major championship at the du Maurier.

Scot had ever won a tournament. It appeared Pamela Wright would turn the trick after a 5-under 66 in the second round. But it was countrywoman Kathryn Marshall who got it done in the final round with her second 67 in three days. It was good for a one-shot win over Sherri Steinhauer, who bogeyed the final hole. Wright was third.

■ THE MARSHALL FILE: A top amateur in Scotland, Marshall attended the University of Arizona and then scored her pro breakthrough in the '95 Farr. She put together her best financial season in '97, scoring four top-10 finishes and earning $200,000. The Farr was Marshall's only LPGA win and she is no longer an active tour player.

■ RECAP: Marianne Morris wrestled the lead from Joan Pitcock on Sunday after a birdie at the par 4 No. 11, her fourth birdie in a six-hole stretch. But Pitcock tied it again with a birdie at the 13th and went back on top when Morris missed a three-foot par putt at the 16th. Morris missed a 14-foot birdie putt on No. 18 by inches, which would have pressured Pitcock. But Pitcock's 20-foot first putt from the fringe was nearly perfect, leaving her two inches from the hole. She tapped it in.

■ THE PITCOCK FILE: She is one of five players who scored their first career wins in the Farr Classic. She played in 224 tournaments, more than nine seasons worth, before winning the '96 Farr.

the 60s for all four of her rounds.

■ THE ROBBINS FILE: Robbins had nine career victories — including two Farr Classic wins and won at least one tournament for seven straight years through 1999.

the next day by 10 shots. Her 61 set a single-round LPGA record, as did her 261 total for 72 holes. Pak followed her 61 with a 63 in the third round, eliminating all suspense for the final round. Lisa Hackney ended up winning the race for second place, edging Karrie Webb by one shot, but finishing nine strokes behind Pak.

■ THE PAK FILE: Not a bad year for the 20-year-old LPGA rookie. Pak came to the Farr directly from a playoff win in the U.S. Women's Open, her second major championship of the summer. Six players went back to the 18th for the playoff, and all six reached the par-5 green in regulation. Only Se Ri Pak got her birdie putt to fall, however, and the Farr Classic belonged to the young Korean for a second straight year.

■ RECAP: One of the most exciting finishes in tournament history. Annika Sorenstam came to the 72nd hole with a one-shot lead, and the large crowd around the green figured she and Rachel Hetherington were both lying two short of the green. But Sorenstam had hit a crooked drive, was forced to chip out and was lying three. Hetherington hit a superb approach to the par-5 18th to set up a good birdie chance, then Sorenstam hit what she called "probably the best pressure shot" of her career to that point to guarantee a par and a playoff. The Swede won on the second hole of sudden death.

■ THE SORENTAM FILE: The greatest player of her era in the early 2000s, Sorenstam ended her competitive career at the end of the 2008 season. Career earnings of $22.5 million leads the LPGA's all-time list.

■ RECAP: As was the case in 1998, Se Ri Pak blew things open with an awesome second round, then pretty much coasted the rest of the way. This time it was a 62 during Friday's second round that gave her a two-shot lead. Her advantage grew to four after a third-round 69 and it wasn't until late in Sunday's round that Maria Hjorth caught fire and put on a little pressure.

■ THE PAK FILE: The Farr was one of five wins, including the Weetabix Women's British Open, a major, for Pak in 2001. She would win five times again the following year.

■ RECAP: Because of personal business in Florida, then missing a flight and having another one cancelled, Rachel Hetherington

(then Rachel Teske) barely arrived in Toledo in time for her Wednesday program tee time. Had she not made it, she would have been disqualified from the tournament. Instead, she positioned herself nicely for the weekend, then played the final two rounds in 12-under for the two-shot win.

■ THE HETHERINGTON FILE: A native of New South Wales, Australia, Hetherington followed her Farr win with two tour victories in 2003.

Pak left the door open with an even-par 71 on Sunday, but none of the top contenders could break 70 and apply any pressure.

■ RECAP: It would have been hard to imagine a more appropriate champion as the Farr Classic celebrated its 20th anniversary. Meg Mallon, a sponsor exemption in the very first

Farr Classic in 1984 who was playing in the event for the 19th time, finally moved into the winner's circle by scoring birdies on three of the last four holes. She capped it with a 10-footer on the 72nd hole that finished off a final-round 68 for a 7-under 277 winning total. Se Ri Pak, who was gunning for a fifth Farr title, had to settle for a second-place tie with Karen Stupples, who came to Toledo fresh off her victory in the Women's British Open.

■ THE MALLON FILE: Meg's win at the Farr polished off a phenomenal five-week run which saw her capture her second U.S. Women's Open title as well as the Canadian Women's Open. The Farr Classic was her 18th and last LPGA Tour title. Mallon, who grew up in the Detroit area and attended Ohio State University, retired after the 2010 Farr Classic.

■ RECAP: Heather Bowie, who was in a tie for sixth after the third round, and Gloria Park, who was tied for 10th, moved past everyone on the leaderboard with fine Sunday rounds while others struggled. Bowie looked to have a sudden-death playoff won on each of the first two holes, only to see Park rally on and around the greens. But Park couldn't keep it going, driving into the rough and then hitting into the water hazard on No. 18, opening the door for Bowie's first LPGA victory.

■ THE BOWIE FILE: With three top-five finishes during her first five Farr appearances, Bowie said she always felt as though Highland Meadows could be the course on which she broke through for her first LPGA victory. She enjoyed her biggest earnings season — $677,425 — and slipped over the $2 million mark in career earnings. She now plays as Heather Young.

■ RECAP: After the storms, after the flooding, after the delays and overnight suspensions in play, Mi Hyun Kim of South Korea was the last golfer standing in the 2006 Farr Classic. She not only survived all of nature's obstacles, she also survived a three-hole, sudden-death playoff against crowd favorite Natalie Gulbis. Gulbis lost her grip on a four-shot lead she owned just before making the turn and Kim roared from behind to tie her with a birdie on the 72nd hole. When she birdied the hole again on the third hole of sudden death it proved to be the winning stroke. Gulbis settled for pars on her last 11 holes, including the playoff.

■ THE KIM FILE: Se Ri Pak won the first of many Farr Classic titles as an LPGA rookie in 1998. She also won two major championships that year and her friends playing in Korea noticed. Mi Hyun Kim was one of the first to follow in her footsteps, coming to the LPGA Tour in '99, and she has fashioned a fine career of her own. The Farr represented her seventh career title.

■ RECAP: Pak took the upper hand quickly with an opening-round 63, but lost her grip on the lead during the final round when young tour star Morgan Pressel grabbed a brief, three-shot lead with a hole-in-one at No. 6. When the deafening roar subsided, playing partner Pak answered with an 8-iron shot to 22 feet and sank a putt with a lot of break. Game on, she seemed to say. By the 15th hole, Pak was back on top and she cruised to a three-shot win for her fifth Farr Classic title.

■ THE PAK FILE: Through '07, Se Ri had played in the Farr Classic 11 times, producing five wins, one runner-up slot, one third, and one fourth-place finish. Total Toledo earnings during that stretch: $995,073.

low on Sunday with a 64 but ended two shots in arrears.

■ THE CREAMER FILE: The Farr was one of Paula's four victories in 2008 and, during the course of the year, she became the fastest in LPGA history to surpass both $4 million and $5 million in career earnings.

■ RECAP: Defending champion Paula Creamer withdrew prior to starting the first round with a thumb injury and, through 36 holes, the '09 Farr was a dogfight with 28 players within five shots of the lead. That changed on Saturday when Eunjung Yi went low to the tune of a 61, one shot off the Highland Meadows course record. Her four-shot lead disappeared during the final round, but she managed to get into a playoff with Morgan Pressel and won with a birdie on the first hole of sudden death. Phenom Michelle Wie closed with a 64 to head a three-way tie for third.

■ THE YI FILE: The Farr title was the first of Yi's LPGA career and she accomplished it at age 21.

■ RECAP: There was no language barrier during the four-person playoff in the 2010 Farr. Na Yeon Choi clashed with fellow South Koreans

In-Kyung Kim and Song-Hee Kim, not to mention Christina Kim, American born of Korean parents. If that wasn't enough, Jiyai Shin missed the playoff by a stroke and Inbee Park by two shots. Choi, who lost a once-comfortable lead on the back nine, steadied herself to make the playoff and then prevailed with a three-foot birdie putt on the second hole of sudden death. Still, a big day for all the Seoul Sisters.

■ THE CHOI FILE: This was the third win of Choi's short LPGA career, but the biggest was yet to come. Choi won the U.S. Women's Open, her first major, in 2012.
